

Date:

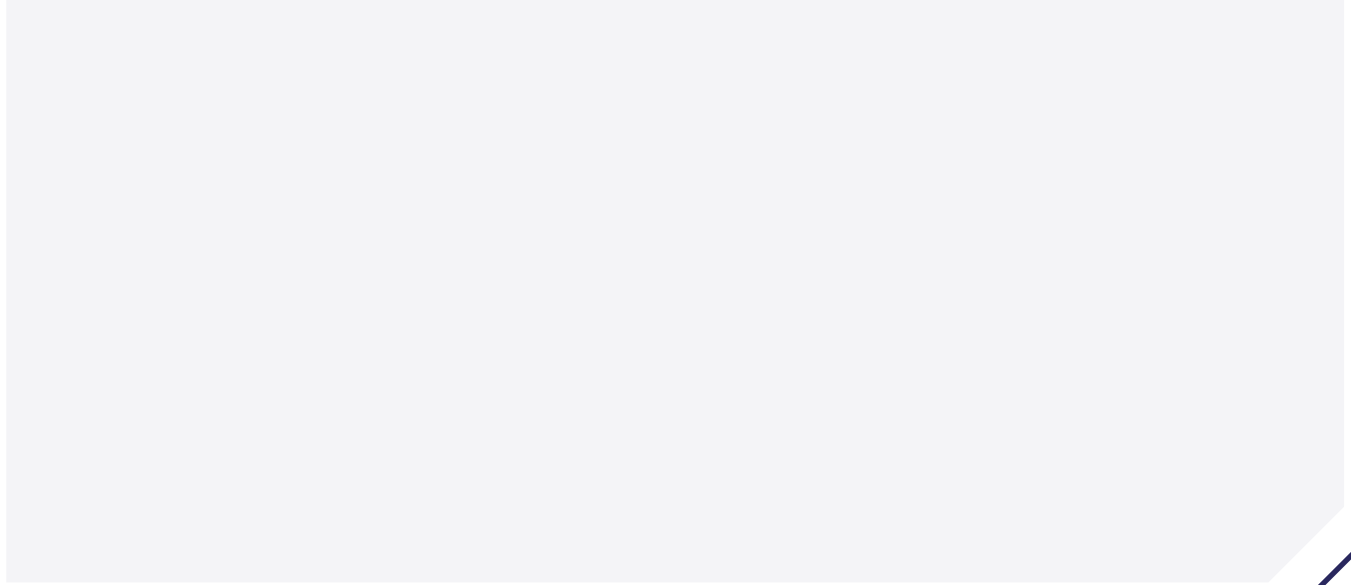

Student Workbook

Things to Think About

While you listen, keep these questions in mind. You can use this space to write down your thoughts:

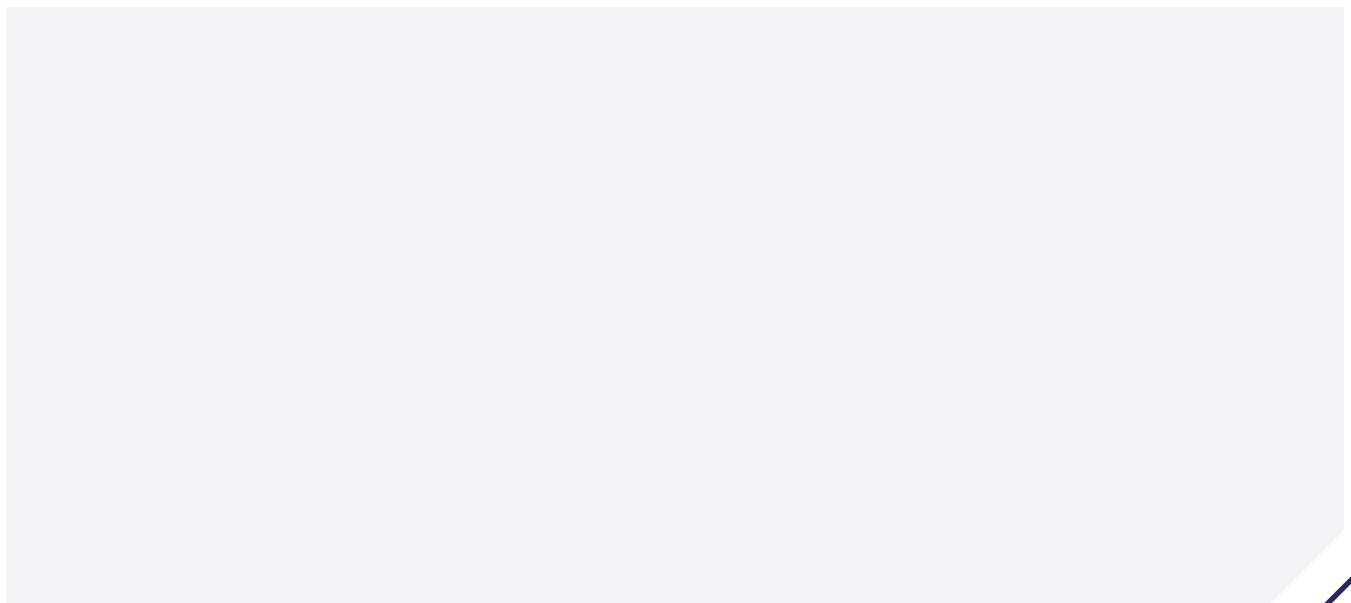

- Which jobs sound fun or interesting to you? • What subjects in school might help you get ready for those jobs?
- Do any of the speakers mention jobs that align with your passions? • What qualifications do these careers require?
- Is there anything you're still curious about?

Use the space below to jot down your thoughts or any other questions that come to mind as you watch.

Prompt Questions:

- What qualifications or skills do I need to start working in this field? • What do you like most about your job?
- Are there specific subjects I should focus on in school to prepare for this career?
- How did you decide this career was right for you? • Were there any challenges you had to overcome?
- What advice would you give to someone who doesn't know what they would like to do?
- How do you think your job will change in the future?

Next Steps

Now that you've learned a bit more about different career options, here are some things you can do next:

- 1. Think about your school subjects: When you're choosing your options, pick subjects that might help you with the careers you liked. Example: If you liked a career in technology, you might want to choose computing as one of your subjects.
- 2. Ask your teacher or careers lead/advisor: Talk to them about what you're interested in and ask what subjects could help you get started on that path. Example: If you're interested in engineering, ask what skills you need and how to develop them.
- 3. Research more: If a career or job sounds interesting to you, take some time to find out more by asking adults at home or looking online. Example: Look up what qualifications or training are needed for the career that caught your attention.

Final Thoughts

Now that the session is over, take a moment to reflect on what you learned today.

What did I learn today?

What subjects might help you get into those jobs

What jobs or careers sounded the most exciting to you?

What is one career pathway I want to explore further?

This is just the beginning of your journey. As you keep learning and exploring, remember to ask lots of questions and think about what interests you the most.
Your choices now can help you find a job you'll love in the future!